- 1.5.8C Write with controlled and/or subtle organization
- 1.5.8F Use grade appropriate conventions of language when writing and editing

Whiteboard Warm Up

Have you ever used an outline to write an essay? What is the purpose?

Quick Question....

What should you do to organize your notes for the research report? *

Check all that apply

- Close your laptop and cry because it's useless to even try
- Really quickly write a report using every fact you found and try to turn it in immediately
- Make sure each piece of information that you recorded is labeled with a topic
- Choose 3 main topics that you want to focus on in your report
- Toss out any facts that are not interesting or that don't apply to your 3 main topics
- Do some more research if you don't have enough information for each of your topics
- Put off everything until the night before the report is due

What 3 Topics are you going to cover about your person?

If you're having trouble narrowing down the three topics on your own, please use these:

- Early Life
 - Find details about when and where they were born, how they were raised, what their family and childhood was like, etc.
 - What influenced or inspired them?
- Accomplishments/Career
 - What is his/her "claim to fame"? What did they accomplish? How did they succeed? What problems did they overcome?
- Lessons Learned
 - What personality traits did the person possess that made them great?
 - How can you apply those lessons to your life?
 - What makes this person someone to look up to?

What is an Outline?

out·line  [out-lahyn]  Show IPA

noun

1. the line by which a figure or object is defined or bounded; contour.
2. a drawing or sketch restricted to line without shading or modeling of form.
3. a general sketch, account, or report, indicating only the main features, as of a book, subject, or project: an outline of medieval history; an outline of a speech.

An outline is a roadmap to keep you from getting lost when you start to write. It's where you organize the questions you'll answer and the information and subtopics you'll cover in your paper. It's a tool to help you, not another assignment to check off the list.
